The Word Guild honours evangelical statesman Glen Argon along with other winners in the 29th Annual Word Awards

MISSISSAUGA, ON — An elder statesman for Canada's Christian community has been formally recognized for his lifetime achievements by Canada's premier fellowship of Christian writers, The Word Guild.

Glen Argon; former editor of the Western Catholic Reporter and the Inner City Voice has impacted Catholics and culture for more than four decades. Glen is this year's recipient of the Leslie K. Tarr, Lifetime Achievement Award announced at The 30th Annual Word Awards Gala on June 15. Argon was chosen for his long and dedicated commitment to Christian journalism, the consistent thoughtful quality of his writing and for the publications he produced. In a video message from his Alberta based home, Argon told the assembly he was honoured to receive the significant award named after Leslie K. Tarr; another influential magazine man whose life and writing was of great consequence to Canadian culture.

Journalists, novelists, poets, theologians, academics and song-writers, along with their guests gathered for the annual Word Awards gala in Mississauga. Sponsors attended, presenting awards to winners along with words of encouragement, increasing motivation for writers to continue with excellence.

This year's awards were filled with laughter, cheer, tears of joy and claps of praise. The crowd was engaged as they listened to the 'short' excerpt for the Christian Living category winner; Jared Brock and Aaron Alford's Bearded Gospel Men. Laughter was heard throughout the hall as the follicular funnies kept coming.

The most inspirational aspect of the 2018 Gala that attendees will not soon forget, was the acceptance speech of Castle Quay's 2018 Best New Canadian Manuscript Award Winner, Kevin John White from Huntsville, ON. Kevin shared in complete humbleness and gratefulness for the mercy of God in his life. As an alcoholic homeless man, White moved in with Steve and Julie Hill, beginning his recovery with their love and support. White expressed his thankfulness to the Hill family and especially Julie when he had her join him on stage. Communicating his gratefulness for the influence she had in his life, Kevin insisted they accept the award together. He shared how it had been Julie Hill who planted the idea for his journals to become a book. As White finished his heartfelt speech, a thunderous applause was heard throughout the building when people rose to their feet for a standing ovation.

"Dancing on a Razor is a collection of short stories taken from the life of Kevin John White, a homeless alcoholic street beggar. What begins as a journal penned by the trembling hand of a hopeless wino, gradually changes into a powerful realization of God's love for a terribly broken man. It is as he writes this "book" that Kevin sees God's hand through all his years of wandering aimlessly across the country, and he is undone by the amazing grace God has poured over him for so long."

This year's grand prize winner was W. Ross Hastings, taking home the $5,000 Grace Irwin Prize for the Best Book in 2018. Ross's book, Echoes of Coinherence: The Trinitarian Theology and Science Together, published by Cascade Books took the full attention of the Grace Irwin judges. Hastings was overwhelmed at the news of his win and overcome with honour being shown to him. His immediate response was, "To God be the glory!" Experiencing a recent back injury, Hastings was not able to attend but sent his video acceptance speech for all to hear, voicing his gratefulness to the Irwin family for their years of involvement to writers in Canada. Honourable mentions were given to Mark Clark and Faye Hall for their excellent entries.

Karen Stiller appropriately won the 2018 Debra Fieguth, Social Justice award with her piece, "Welcoming Refugees in Uganda", published in Faith Today magazine, as coming to the aid of refugees close to Debra's heart. When Karen received confirmation that she won this award she immediately cried, sharing how important this win was to her, having been a friend of the late Debra Fieguth. Honourable mention was given to Angela Reitsma Bick for her article "God's Infinite Love: Speaking Up After a Son's Suicide" on such a heart-breaking topic, as printed in the Christian Courier.

This year's recipient of the Harvey/Mackey award for excellence in journalism was Craig Macartney for his article on "Rev. Lim and the Church That Prayed Him Out", published in Faith Today magazine. Macartney encouraged the audience to allow God to take what they have and use it for God's glory. Sharing parts of his life story of how God took an unlikely and seemingly "unqualified" person to influence others through his writing, Craig inspired those listening to believe God could do the same through them.

Throughout the evening, the musings of Scott Radley kept the crowd laughing. This veteran newspaper columnist and host of The Scott Radley Show on Radio 900CHML, fulfilled the role of Gala Master of Ceremonies for The Word Awards held at Roma's Hospitality Centre in Mississauga.
